A SIGNIFICANT DECLINATION

THERE is considerable significance in the declination of Speaker Henderson to accept another nomination for Congress because he is out of his party on the great question. The speaker very frankly says that a strong sentiment in favor of regulating the trusts by means of the tariff has become apparent in his district. He does not believe that this is the proper method of abating the nuisance. Therefore he cannot accept a nomination which is generally understood to be equivalent to an election.

The position which Speaker Henderson has found himself obliged to take is an indication of the growth in popular favor of the Democratic idea to abolish the tariff on trust-made goods. Although Mr. Henderson does not say so specifically, he is doubtless one of the Republicans who favor a constitutional amendment to give Congress the power, which it already has, to deal properly with the trust question. The speaker, in a telegram to a couple of his constituents, confesses an abhorrence of the trust evil.

But he is not willing to accept a rational method of doing away with it. The trouble with Mr. Henderson is that he doesn't despise the trusts nearly so much as he would have us believe. If he did, he would not be so exceedingly "touchy" on the subject. Still, he is to be commended, perhaps, for his strength in declining to serve a constituency which opposes him on a question vital to the interests of the American people. It is apparent, too, that with Speaker Henderson out of Congress, the trusts will have lost another good friend.

Now let the Republicans in the Henderson district get together and endorse the nomination of former Governor Horace E. Boies by the Democrats. There is a man who will truly represent their views on the matter of trusts. Governor Boies, in common with a great majority of the Democrats, favors the free admission of this country of all articles that will come into competition with trust-made goods. That is what the Iowa Republicans seem to want, but they will never get it as long as they continue to elect Republican Congressmen and Senators.

The constitutional amendment notion has been proven a hollow sham and mockery. Even the New York Sun, one of the most influential of all the Republican newspapers and a valued ally of the trusts, has pointed out that under the most favorable circumstances, a law based on a constitutional amendment cannot possibly take effect until 1907 or 1908. If by that time the trusts are not powerful enough to prevent any sort of adverse legislation it will be because a Democratic administration has intervened.—Salt Lake Herald.

THERE seems to be another great battle of railroad giants to begin, in which the Goulds, with Rockefeller, Senator Clark, Russel Sage and other leading financiers are allied on the one hand, and a combination of the Vanderbilts, J. Pierpont Morgan, Cramp's Ship building Company and the Postal Telegraph Company is on the other side. It seems also that the United States Steel Corporation is divided within itself as to which side of the impending contest it will espouse. Perhaps in this battle, which is about to be waged, the greatest trust of the country may become so involved that its managers will quarrel and the corporation be dissolved.—Oakland Enquirer.

THE adoption of a silver plank by a Republican convention would be as ridiculous as a prohibition resolution by an association of liquor dealers. But the Republicans of Nevada cannot be charged with such absurdity. Its alleged "Silver plank" is nothing more or less than an endorsement of the gold standard policy of the National Republican party and its purpose to destroy what little remnant of bimetalism that remains in the financial system of the Nation.

THE latest novelty is a "house automobile." One now on exhibition in the east contains six rooms and a bath. It is sixty-five feet long and cost $30,000. A family in possession of such a vehicle can summer across the country in much the same way as yachting across the seas, and there is no more rent to pay in one case than in the other.

DR. DIXON of Philadelphia, president of the American Academy of Sciences, says that the protection accorded to the bears in Yellowstone Park has rendered them so tame that they threaten to become a nuisance. They hang around the hotels to eat garbage, and it is said that a small boy with a rock can drive a grizzly away.

THE latest story from New York is that Mr. Schwab gets only $100,000 a year and perhaps it is this rapid shrinking in the public estimation of his salary that makes him sick and need a rest.
